Weight limits for Main Street

Mayor thinks 10-ton limit will have immediate impact on safety

BY MARK CAMPBELL

When the City of Madison in 2014 agreed to assume control and maintenance of a 4-mile stretch of State Road 56 from downtown Madison to the top of Hanover Hill as part of the new US 421 bridge approach project, city officials started planning for the future — not only the costly repairs and upgrades the well-worn highway would likely need but also the opportunities of finally owning and controlling the city's Main Street — and that future is now.

Madison took over control from the Indiana Department of Transportation on July 1, and now a month later the city will begin making its first significant changes by placing a 10-ton weight limit on the roughly 2-mile stretch of former SR 56 that has long served as the city's Main Street but has always been controlled by the state.

"Never before in our history has this not been a state highway," Mayor Bob Courtney said Thursday, just hours after the new weight limit signs were installed. "A lot of people have wanted heavy trucks off that highway for a long time and now we can finally do that. We have never had control of our Main Street and I'm super excited about it."

Courtney said the decision to place and enforce tighter weight limits is about more than just keeping semis, dump trucks and other heavily loads out of the downtown neighborhoods and historic district. He said by eliminating about 2,000 heavy trucks per month, Main Street will be safer for cars, bicyclists, pedestrians and golf carts and give the city a better chance to maintain that decaying roadway until the estimated $5 million repairs can be funded and then keep the new roadway in better shape moving forward.

A tractor trailer navigates the intersection of Jefferson and Main streets Thursday in downtown Madison. Beginning Monday heavy trucks will no longer be allowed on Main Street past that intersection. The City of Madison, which took over control and maintenance of Main Street — formerly State Road 56 — on July 1 and has now set a 10-ton weight limit on the road, forcing heavy trucks to go around on U.S. 421 and across Clifty Drive to get to the west side of the county.

Mayor Bob Courtney said by eliminating about 2,000 heavy trucks per month, Main Street will be safer for cars, bicyclists, pedestrians and golf carts and give the city a better chance to maintain that decaying roadway until the estimated $5 million repairs can be funded and then keep the new roadway in better shape moving forward.

"This is about traffic safety, quality of life and protecting our investment," Courtney said, noting that large trucks are much more damaging to the roadway — and the water and sewer lines buried beneath the pavement — than the thousands of other vehicles that travel Main Street monthly.

Courtney said the new weight limits will go into effect on Monday, Aug. 3, and that Madison Police Officers will begin enforcing the change immediately — as well as speeding — to slow the stream of truckers who have always driven through the center of town to get to the west end of the county.

"We're serious about moving heavy truck traffic off our Main Street," Courtney said. "But this is more about educating the businesses and their drivers than writing tickets. We're not going to have scales out weighing trucks but we do want to stop repeat offenders."

Courtney said some trucks will still be allowed on Main Street because there are a number of businesses in the downtown area that rely on trucking for delivery of the goods they sell. He also noted that with the lack of other access to some of those businesses, some trucks will continue to make

Heavy rain floods roads and parking lots

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Residents of the Courier area got a break from the 90-degree heat Thursday, but it came in the form of several inches of seemingly endless rainfall that flooded roads, sidewalks and parking lots and caused trees to fall in some areas.

The heavy showers began around 9 a.m. and continued until late in the evening, dumping 3-5 inches throughout the area and resulting in a flash flood advisory that lasted until 8 p.m. A flash flood watch was still in effect for all of Southern Indiana and central Kentucky until 8 a.m. today, according to the National Weather Service.

NWS reports Madison and Jefferson County got three to four inches of rainfall Thursday, flooding several roads downtown and on the hilltop to different degrees.

On Hanging Rock Hill, rapid rainfall caused water to gush over the waterfall cliff onto the roadway and flood Cragmont Street as lines of cars tried to get through with dramatic video of the waterfall appearing on social media.

Cars splashed through standing water on Vaughn Drive downtown as sewer main covers and gutters spewed water onto the road and nearby sidewalks.

A resident of the Presidential Estates on Madison's hilltop plows through high water Thursday to get to a parking area off Eisenhower Drive after a daylong, 4-inch deluge of rainfall overwhelmed storm sewers and flooded roads, parking lots and yards in several areas.

Hutchison Lane and the north end of Michigan Road bore the brunt of flooding on the hilltop, as parts of the roadway were impassable and a few people even flooded their vehicles trying to get through, said Josh Taylor, chief deputy for the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office.

In one case, Sheriff's Corporal Patrick Finnegan waded into the deep water to help push a resident's car from the flood waters onto the next section of road, Taylor said. Deputies on Friday morning also tended to a fallen tree in the roadway on North Bee Camp Road, he said.

In addition, drainage ditches overflowed and parking lots flooded on the east side of Michigan Road at the Presidential Estates apartments as well as several businesses.

Trimble County received up to 3 inches of rain as U.S. 421 North and ditches on U.S. 42 flooded periodically throughout the day, Office of Emergency Management Director Andrew Stark said. The southwestern corner of the county near Wises Landing and Oldham County got as much as 4 inches, according to the National Weather Service.

Although some driveways and roads on the riverfront in Milton had standing water, most of it cleared within an hour after the rainfall stopped, Stark said. His department heard no reports of accidents or weather-related emergencies except for a few downed trees on Milton Hill that did not cause long-term traffic delays, he said.

After the majority of the rain stopped around 8 p.m., Stark said flooding in different areas subsided within "30 minutes to an hour."

Efforts to reach safety officials in Carroll County were unsuccessful, but the area also collected more than 3 inches of rainfall, according to NWS.

The rain is expected to continue this weekend with an 80% chance for precipitation today and 40% on Sunday. Temperatures will stay in the high 70s to low 80s.

Pandemic cancels both Ribberfest, Chautauqua Festival

BY MARK CAMPBELL

One by one the ongoing coronavirus has claimed every big community event and festival in the area until Thursday when two of the biggest and most successful events in Madison — the Madison Chautauqua Festival of Art and Madison Ribberfest — both pulled the plug on the same day.

Organizers of both events have been waiting and watching COVID-19 data and local, state and regional attempts to control the spread of the virus over the past several months, hoping the pandemic would subside enough to provide a safe window of opportunity to hold their events.

First the June River Jam was canceled in March, then the July Madison Regatta and Roostertail Music Festival was postponed in April and later the July Jefferson County 4-H Fair fell in May. Rather than cancel outright, Ribberfest first announced that it would scale back to a one-day music festival with crowd limitations to provide adequate social distancing but in the end even that wasn't enough to provide a safe enough environment for spectators, volunteers and those who work the venue.

The Chautauqua announced its plans to postpone until 2021 on Thursday morning with the Ribberfest canceling its scaled back event about an hour later.

Chautauqua, a juried fine arts and crafts festival scheduled for Sept. 26-27, draws hundreds of artists and dozens of food vendors annually as about 40,000 guests descend on the streets of the historic neighborhoods where the event is held and throughout Madison.

"With the current COVID-19 pandemic and the statewide restrictions associated with it, we cannot feasibly have the festival this year," said Chautauqua Committee President Kara Hinze. "The health and safety of festival goers, artists, vendors and volunteers is our top priority. Out of an abundance of caution, we have made the difficult decision to cancel the 2020 festival for this September. Our committee members will be contacting artists, concessionaires, sponsors and others in the coming days to discuss next steps. We now set our sights on to looking forward to the 2021 festival."

The 2020 Chautauqua was to be the group's milestone 50th event. Now that milestone will take place in 2021.

"An anniversary as significant as this cannot be overlooked," said Joe DeVito, Chautauqua entertainment coordinator. "When we host the festival in 2021, it will still be the 50th one, so we will be sure to celebrate this achievement then."

All artists will receive a full refund for booth fees and jurying will roll over to 2021," a statement from the organization said. "Please contact info@madisonchautauqua.com for any questions or concerns."

Facing the same set of issues, Ribberfest ultimately decided that even a limited one-day music event on Aug. 22 was too risky for those involved and their guests. The festival is normally a two-day event drawing thousands to Bicentennial Park for a lineup of blues music and barbecue including the annual Indiana State BBQ Championship, sanctioned by the Kansas City Barbecue Society.

FESTIVAL

This year's Swiss Wine Festival in Vevay, Indiana, Apple Festival in Bedford, Kentucky, and the Pumpkin Show in Versailles, Indiana, have also been canceled.

"Our committee has remained very hopeful throughout the last few months that we would be able to have our event this year, albeit a bit differently than usual. Now that we are almost to August, and seeing that our local, statewide, and national positive COVID-19 cases are on the rise, we believe that it is in the best interest of our volunteers, patrons, and our entire community to cancel our event this year," said Ribberfest Event Coordinator Katie Burress.

"It is unfortunate that we are having to make exceptionally difficult decisions this year. We have all been faced with impossible decisions throughout the last few months, and sadly, canceling Ribberfest this year is the best choice for us at this time," said Visit Madison Inc. Board of Tourism President Cara Fox.

Ribberfest will issue a refund to those who have already purchased 2020 wristbands with details to be posted on the group's website or social media page.

The Ribberfest committee will move forward with "Pigmania," — its concrete pig decorating contest that supports the annual Madison Ribberfest Scholarship program — and can be seen around town in front of the participating businesses and a list of businesses and directions for voting on the 'People's Choice' Pig also will be shared soon.

Cancellation of Chautauqua and Ribberfest in Madison follows similar decisions in other neighboring communities. This year's Swiss Wine Festival in Vevay, Indiana, Apple Festival in Bedford, Kentucky, and the Pumpkin Show in Versailles, Indiana, have also been canceled — the first time since 1942-45 during World War II that the Pumpkin Show has not been held.

CORRECTION

A Jefferson County Commissioners story in the Saturday, July 11, 2020 edition was misleading in terms of a federal CARES Relief Loan for small businesses in Jefferson County impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic. Visit Madison Inc. was before the Commissioners seeking approval to apply for the loan and they would be the agency in charge of handling loan applications. Up to $150,000 is being sought to assist small companies of less than 50 employees with a focus on those owned by veterans, minorities and women.

Girls golf ready to kick off 2020-21 season

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

After months of uncertainty and near-inactivity, high school sports are set to resume in the state of Indiana starting next week.

As it does every year, it will be girls golf that lifts the lid on the 2020-2021 season with three of the four local schools beginning play on Monday. Kentucky has postponed the start of its girls and boys golf seasons until Sept. 7.

There are high hopes among all area schools with Madison and Southwestern each chasing sectional championships and Shawe hopeful of fielding a complete team for the first time in four years.

A closer look at each team:

David Campbell

David Campbell

Southwestern High School senior Belle Crawford studies the green on No. 18 during the Indiana Junior PGA event at Sunrise Golf Course on Tuesday. Crawford will be one of the leaders for the Rebels this year.

MADISON CUBS

Madison returns four starters from its sectional championship team a year ago, so expectations are high as the Cubs kick off the season.

"This is the biggest team I've ever had the privilege of coaching. Many years, I've had to scramble for players, so I'm extremely excited to return four starters and six overall," Madison coach Jake Shockley said. "I also really like the potential of the newcomers."

Keara Eder, Jenna Imel, Grace Bronkella and Ally Skirvin started nearly every match for Madison a season ago and the group got stronger the more they played.

Eder, who will be a junior, is one of the top players in the state. A two-time sectional champion and a state finals qualifier last year, Eder is on the short list of those who could legitimately win the state championship. But Shockley also knows the rest of the group could be special.

"Keara has a chance to make some major noise this year. She has state experience under her belt, and she has a better understanding of what it takes to be an elite golfer," Shockley said. "I also think Jenna has the opportunity to capitalize on her senior year. She has shown some good scores in practice, and she's hungry for some individual success, I think. I'm really looking forward to what the two of them put together this season. Grace and Ally, both, have also shown improvement and have the potential to be really good golfers this year and beyond. Grace is hitting the ball farther and Ally's swing is beautiful. They both will only get better with experience."

Gibson James and Kauai Schneider also saw action last season and the Cubs welcome Reagan Warren, Gracie Gasaway and Isa James to the team this season.

"The fifth starting spot is kind of wide open at the moment, and I can see any of a number of players filling that position," Shockley said. "Each player has their own strength to stake their claim for that spot, and I've put a lot of thought into who will fill that position. I really like the work the less experienced girls have put in and their potential."

Madison opens the season on Monday in the Bloomington South Invitational, then travels to Jennings County on Tuesday and plays in the Seymour Invitational on Wednesday. After another road match at New Albany on Saturday, Aug. 8, the Cubs finally make their home debut on Monday, Aug. 10 against Henryville.

SHAWE HILLTOPPERS

Shawe put together a special season in 2017 to win the first girls golf sectional title in school history but has not fielded a complete team since. That changes this year when the Hilltoppers have four players ready to suit up for the school.

It will be a young team for Shawe, but one with a lot of talent. Sophomore Bailey Kilgore leads the squad as the veteran after an all-conference freshman campaign with freshmen Gia Craig, Yolett Perez and Kira Wells making up the rest of the team.

"We are excited to have a full team and compete as such for the first time in four years," Shawe coach David Hertz said. "Bailey Kilgore had a strong finish to her freshman campaign and there's no reason to think that won't carry over to this year. Kira Wells leads a talented group of freshmen anxious to play after their junior high season was canceled in the spring. Kira has the most experience but Gia Craig and Yolett Perez have put in a lot of work to get better. All in all, the team should be fun to watch the next few years."

Shawe opens up the season at home on Monday when the Hilltoppers host Switzerland County at Sunrise Golf Course. Shawe then returns to action on Friday when it faces Southwestern and Switzerland at Butler Falls Golf Course in Hanover.

SOUTHWESTERN REBELS

Southwestern fell just short of winning its first-ever sectional title last year and despite losses to graduation, the Rebels are hopeful to be in the same spot this season.

Southwestern tied Madison with a 371 at last year's sectional but lost on a fifth-player tiebreaker by just four strokes. Three of the Rebels' top six players have since graduated but what is left should be enough to power Southwestern to its fourth-straight Ohio River Valley Conference title and remain in contention in the sectional.

Seniors Belle Crawford and Elle Foley took turns leading the team last year. Crawford scored a hole-in-one while taking medalist honors in the ORVC meet and finished fifth in the sectional while Foley's 88 allowed her to place second in the sectional and she led the team at the regional. Addy Leach rounds out Southwestern's returning players.

Southwestern is the only local school that will not begin the season on Monday. The Rebels' season opener is on Friday when they host Shawe and Switzerland County at Butler Falls Golf Course.

SWITZERLAND COUNTY PACERS

Switzerland County finished second in the Ohio River Valley Conference with a young team a year ago and is looking for improvement this season.

The Pacers return three regulars from that squad — Lily Williams, Hailey Hines and Rori Ware — all of whom are sophomores. The school also has several newcomers to help bolster the squad.

Switzerland opens the season on Monday at Sunrise Golf Course in Madison against Shawe. The Pacers then host Jac-Cen-Del on Thursday before squaring off against Shawe and Southwestern at Butler Falls Golf Course on Friday.

Mefford and Nutley each name college choices

Tereshko misses cut at Western Amateur Open

Foster Mefford and Jade Nutley, the reigning Madison Courier Basketball Players of the Year, each verbally committed to colleges recently.

Foster, a senior at Southwestern, committed to Bethel University on July 13 while Nutley, a senior at Madison, committed to Indiana Wesleyan on July 17.

Mefford, a 6-foot-2 point guard, had an outstanding junior season while leading an injury-riddled Southwestern squad to a 17-9 record and a sectional runner-up finish. He averaged an area-best 20.7 points per game while becoming the 11th player in school history to reach 1,000 career points. His 1,178 points are currently fifth on the school's career scoring list and he is already the Rebels' all-time assist leader.

Nutley, a 6-foot-1 forward/center, had a dominate 2019-20 season that saw her average a double-double at just under 15 points and just over 10 rebounds per game for the 14-9 Lady Cubs. She is currently listed on ESPN's Top 100 recruiting list and enters her senior season with 966 career points and 670 career rebounds.

Both players are expected to officially sign in November.

THURSTON SCORELESS IN LOSS

Former Madison Consolidated High School star Ryan Thurston tossed a scoreless two-thirds of an inning in the Fargo-Moorhead RedHawks' 5-2 loss to the St. Paul Saints in an American Association baseball game on Thursday.

Thurston, a left-hander, allowed one hit while striking out one and not walking a batter in his brief stint. Currently, he is 1-2 with a 7.04 ERA in 12 appearances for the RedHawks. He has struck out 22 and walked just seven in 15 1/3 innings.

TERESHKO MISSES CUT

Former Madison Consolidated High School standout and current Hanover College golf coach Justin Tereshko missed the cut at the Western Amateur Open held this week at Crooked Stick Golf Club in Carmel.

Tereshko followed a first-round 75 with a 73 in the second round but was outside of the top 40 needed to advance. Angus Flanagan of Woking, England, went on to shoot a four-round total of 277 to win the event by one stroke.

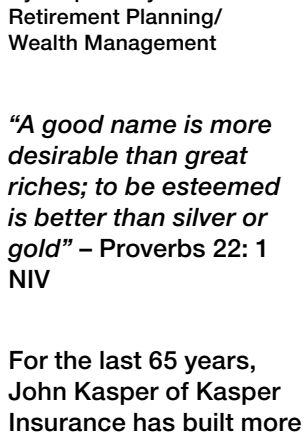
Foundational Questions



Layin' It on the Line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

"A good name is more desirable than great riches; to be esteemed is better than silver or gold" – Proverbs 22: 1 NIV

For the last 65 years, John Kasper of Kasper Insurance has built more than a premier insurance agency. He has built a reputation of integrity, service, and compassion that is unrivaled in this community.

When John asked me to join him and his son, Anthony, I immediately accepted the opportunity. It is a pleasure to be associated with a firm that not only has a rich history, but is always looking for ways to keep up with the changing needs of their current and future clients.

One of the ways you build a legacy in this business is by helping clients identify foundational (and often difficult) questions, and then help the client find the answer(s) to those questions. We think everyone should know what their answers should be to the following questions:

1. How much money is enough to provide the guaranteed monthly income you need for the rest of your life?
2. How will you guarantee your income will stay ahead of inflation, after tax, for the rest of your life?
3. How will you grow your assets (if necessary) but guarantee no losses to your account, even while still earning competitive returns?
4. How will you protect your accounts from all market losses, unnecessary fees, and current taxation, but still stay ahead of inflation?
5. How do you prepare for a "worst-case scenario", but still retain access to all your money?

Unfortunately, most people never address these questions because they start their retirement planning by trying to accumulate as much money as possible. That's not necessarily bad, but most people never leave the accumulation stage of planning. When it's time to start spending what they have accumulated, they have no strategy, no guarantees, no protections, no clue, and soon ... no money.

One of the reasons Kasper Insurance is still going strong after 65 years is because we have never really focused on the accumulation of assets. Accumulation is probably the easiest part of retirement planning and there are a lot of brokers out there who do that.

We choose to focus on the preservation and distribution of assets over a lifetime. We will help you arrange and stretch your assets to provide income you can never outlive, opportunity for growth with no market losses, liquidity, easy and complete transfer of wealth at your death to whomever you choose, and we will eliminate every unnecessary tax, fee, and investment cost along the way.

We believe the strategies and tools you used to get TO retirement are not the strategies and tools you should use to get THROUGH retirement.

We will show you how to make the most efficient choices regarding your IRA's, 401(k)'s 403(b)'s, pension plans, brokerage accounts, CD's, and Money Markets.

We will even guide you through the complicated worlds of Social Security and Medicare.

Give us a call and see why after 65 years of taking care of you, we are just getting started!

deliveries from Main Street but all other heavy vehicles will be expected to do what they have always done and follow State Road 56 through town.

"The quality of life change for people who live on Main Street is going to be felt quite immediately. I don't want to mislead people that 100% of the truck traffic is going to come off Main Street, because that's not practical, but probably 80% of the heavy truck traffic, with the exception of local deliveries and agricultural deliveries, will come off very quickly," Courtney said.

Under INDOT's reconfiguration of State Road 56 and US 421 for the new bridge access route, those two highways will merge at the end of the bridge, continue to the intersection of Jefferson and Main streets and then north up the US 421 hill. At that point trucks traveling north will follow US 421 straight through the roundabout while trucks traveling west will take State Road 56 west through the roundabout where State Roads 56 and 62 will merge and become Clifty Drive on the hilltop.

Trucks that used to cut right through downtown Madison to get to Hanover and the west end of the county will add about 10 miles to their round trip by going around on US 421 and Clifty Drive and mostly likely pass those costs on to customers in higher shipping fees. The new route will also add more heavy traffic to an already busy Clifty Drive, but Courtney said that highway can handle the extra vehicles and that's where truck traffic should be anyhow.

US 421 and Clifty Drive are both wider and more modern highways with turning lanes and less pedestrian traffic and street-side parking that Main Street, Courtney said.

"That's the route the truck traffic should be following anyhow," Courtney added. "That route is the new State Road 56 and the trucks should be following the state route."

Courtney said local truckers are well familiar with the new route they will be taking and out-of-town drivers will be able to follow the signs the city installed in Thursday's downpour, signage provided by INDOT or GPS directional systems on their vehicles once those are updated for the new weight limits and route.

"We're hoping GPS systems will be updated and we've met with INDOT about directional signage so they're in the process of getting those installed," Courtney said.

He said while the new route should quickly move less desirable traffic off Main Street, he thinks it will not have an impact on the tourists and shoppers who are the lifeblood of the downtown business district.

"I don't think we'll lose our tourist traffic at all. Our downtown is such a visible part of the existing highway system that they will be coming across the bridge where there's a gateway there that's announcing historic Madison. They're going to drive through historic Madison — through a residential neighborhood — and then be at an intersection where they can see our downtown central business district before they turn right onto the highway. I think we will still be easily found," he noted.

A 10-ton weight limit from Jefferson Street west to the city limits will go into effect on Main Street in downtown Madison beginning Monday, Aug. 3. The limit will route heavy truck traffic off Main Street, which the city took over control and maintenance of on July 1.

Communication is key to a happy marriage

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I love my wife very much and try to be a good husband. However, my wife has an explosive temper. Whenever she is mad at me, she punishes me by not speaking to me. This time, she has not spoken to me for almost a week. On the other hand, she can talk to her friends on the phone for hours. What should I do? I am exasperated. — Out of Ideas

Dear Out of Ideas: The silent treatment is bad medicine. It leaves wounds to fester when they could heal. Implore your wife to seek marriage counseling with you as soon as you're able. It is imperative for the health of your marriage.

Dear Annie: Your answer to "Confused" was good as far as it went but I think you are missing another very important issue here. This guy's behavior on the job is legally wrong. He is lucky he hasn't gotten into serious trouble before now. Especially, for being a 50-year-old man hitting on a 20-something woman. If he keeps that up, I would be very surprised if someone didn't lodge a complaint to human resources against him. If someone hasn't explained to him by now that his behavior borders on sexual harassment, then they should have. If no one else clues him in, then his wife definitely should. It is downright creepy that a guy in his 50s is hitting on someone young enough to be his daughter. I wish there had been a movement against that kind of behavior when I was that age. — Suzie

Dear Suzie: True: I only considered it from the wife's perspective. You've raised another troubling aspect of the situation. These young women may well be as uncomfortable about the texts as is his wife. And though it's not anyone else's responsibility to teach him basic decency, perhaps your letter will inform him — and others — of the effect of his behavior. Let's hope he shows more respect to everyone involved.

Dear Annie: When I was 12, my father taught me how to mow the lawn. We would first clear the yard, sidewalks and curb of any trash or other debris. He showed me how to start the mower and how to walk behind it and safely use it. Afterward, we raked the lawn (no grass catcher on the mower). Then we would sweep the curb, street and sidewalk and bag up all the clippings. After this, we would then water the lawn and rinse off the curb. He explained that a clean curb would help water flow to the sewer drain. When fall would come, it was time for leaf removal. We would rake leaves and bag them up to set out for the trash collectors.

Forty years later, I still use the same regimen. I am appalled by commercial and residential lawn caretakers who blow all the clippings in the street or at the curb. It is so disturbing to me to see curbs that have grass, weeds, paper and debris of all kinds. When it rains, it floods because the water can't flow down to the sewers. The debris clogs the curbs. This letter is to appeal to everyone who mows lawns and blows leaves to please do not blow them in the street or curbs. Bag it up and set it out for recycling. — Father Knew Best

Dear FKB: Leaving yard waste in the street is impolite and, in many cities, illegal. In addition to clogging storm drains, it can become slick and endanger cyclists and pedestrians. Avoid incurring fines and your neighbors' wrath: Sweep and bag up your clippings.

Caught in the act

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My letter about how to deal with my wife about getting a second dog made it in your column. I never in my wildest dreams ever thought it would! This is a nightmare right out of a TV sitcom whereby the husband does something stupid that publicly humiliates his wife, and their neighbors and friends are privy to the inner workings (or nonworkings) of their marriage. This is not your fault at all; I'm the one who was stupid enough to write.

As of this writing, she has not seen the column, nor have any of her friends. By the way, we live in a small town and my wife has a very visible job.

I cannot tell you how much trouble I am in if she finds out. She will hate me forever. I have done many things to cause her frustration over the years; public humiliation may be that which causes irreparable harm. She's already had to put up with numerous health problems and financial problems and other problems.

I'm in so much trouble. What do I do? — Caught Writing to Dear Annie

Dear Caught Writing: You might be digging yourself into an even bigger hole than your new puppy could dig in your backyard. Now, let's get you out of the hole.

First of all, it's never wrong to ask for help. If your wife sees your letter and is upset with your writing to me, then share how you wanted to gain perspective as to why she didn't want a second dog and wanted to be understood for your needs. Seeking advice and support is admirable, not embarrassing.

Consider sharing the letter with your wife directly. It's better to have the news come from you than from a friend or neighbor. She'll learn just how much getting a second dog means to you, and you'll get to hear her reaction to the letter, not just what you fear she'll say. Once you both fall in love with your new furry addition to your family, you might look back at these letters fondly. Best of luck!

Dear Annie: Our neighbor, friend and co-worker has a green thumb and a wonderful, bountiful garden. The garden produces more than she can ever use, and so, each week during the summer, we are presented with squash, kale and peppers. It is more than I can use either, but I do not want to cause hurt feelings.

What is the right response to the generosity of someone I do not want to offend? She gives me more than I could use, even if I were a good cook, which I am not, by the way! — Summer's Abundance

Dear Summer's Abundance: Sounds delicious. What a lovely neighbor. The correct response is to continue to show her gratitude and appreciation. If you can't eat and use all of the vegetables, then you have two choices. You can politely tell her exactly that — that you really only use about half of her produce. Or you can give away the produce to friends and family.

Eating vegetables fresh from the garden is very healthy. I'm sure you can find friends who would appreciate the fresh produce. That way, you are paying your neighbor's kindness forward.
